THE DEAF MUTE WILL CASE.

A Will Made by Pantomime.

WILL SUSTAINED—THE STENOGRAPHER'S REPORT.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier.

MACHIAS, Jan. 14, 1882.

My last letter, sketching the case of Jacob Foster and wife, appellants, from decree of Judge of Probate, disallowing will of Horatio N. Foster, a deaf mute, seemed to call for a supplement, giving its close; and the amount involved, some $7000, the novelty and importance, as well as the great local interest of the case requires a fuller statement.

THE TRIAL.

The trial occupied six days, of which the opening statements of John F. Lynch of Machias, for the will, and C. B. Rounds, of Calais, against it, occupied some six hours. The closing argument of A. McNichol, of Calais, against the will, and Herbert M. Heath, of Augusta, in support of the will, occupied some five hours each. The charge of Judge Peters was about an hour in length.

Hon. John C. Talbot, of East Machias, originally of counsel before the Probate Court, being necessarily a witness in the case, could not under a recent rule of Court, take an active part in the trial, and Mr. Rounds was called to make the opening statement, which, in despite of the short notice for preparation was clear and able.

THE PROPERTY.

Some three years since, Clarrissa B. Foster, widow and legatee of Hon. Stephen C. Foster, of Pembroke, died, leaving an estate of nearly $60,000 in bonds, shipping, etc., disposed of by her will in 1877, dividing it equally among six persons, her sister Susan Marshland her five brothers, Alfred, Samuel F., Horatio N., (a deaf mute), Andrew, and Jacob. In the meantime Mrs Marsh had died; her son, Samuel W. had received by the terms of the will, his mother's share, and successfully objected to the Executor's paying over to Horatio N., (the deaf mute), his share. On account of this action of Marsh, Jacob and Andrew procured the appointment of a guardian for Horatio, themselves signing a petition to the Probate Court declaring him incompetent to manage his estate. It appeared in evidence that it was the oral wish of Clarissa and two of her brothers, that Horatio's share should go directly to him and that he and his brother Jacob, with whom he had lived for thirty years, should enjoy it, and not after Horatio's death it should go to Jacob.

When Horatio found that the other legatees had received their shares from Mr. Hobart, the Executor, and that his was withheld to be divided after his death, he was very indignant, and was only appeased by Jacob's putting some of his own bonds into an envelope with his, (Horatio's), name upon it, and his being made to believe the bonds were a part of his share.

THE DEAF MUTE.

Horatio N. Foster, the testator in this case, was a deaf mute, who could neither read, write, (except his own name), nor use the deaf and dumb alphabet. He had however learned to recognize the written names of all the members of the family. When the will was made, March 3, 1880, eleven days before his death, he was seventy-six years old, and for three months had been suffering from paralysis of the right arm and leg.

He was not a congenital deaf mute, but lost his hearing when three years old, and in consequence of that, the most of what little speech he had acquired. He belonged to an intellectual family, and was akin to the leading families of what one of the counsel called "the ancient and aristocratic town of East Machias." He was a man of fine physique, six feet tall, with a head indicative of intellect.

METHOD OF COMMUNICATION.

Ideas were communicated to him by pantomime and words. By long practice, he had learned to read many words upon the lips, by watching intently the lips and face of the party talking to him. In response he used imitative signs, and partially pronounced a few words. Most of his language was pantomimic. For instance, a week, the motion of prayer, (one Sunday or praying day); a year, the imitation of reaping; wife, the arm in a position to be taken by a woman and a kiss; money, the circular shape of a dollar on the palm; to distinguish silver money, he touches his white cuff, collar or shirt. One witness, Warren Huntley, a good imitator, relieved the seriousness of the trial, and excited the risibles of all by his reproduction of Horatio's pantomime of various animals, such as a bear, fox, pig, etc. His fox was a veritable Reynard, ears, nose and long bushy tail.

HIS MENTAL POWERS.

His skill in farming, to plan and work, was above the average. In mechanical work he was a genius. Carpentry, gun work, cobbling, mason work, iron work, blacksmithing, turning, coopering, wagon work, repairing clocks, manufacturing churns, tubs, sleds, etc., in all these his skill was wonderful. In invention, many of his ideas would have been patentable. As a man he seemed to have all the moral and religious ideas common to men.

Once, wishing to make a padlock of his pet pig safe, he took out the post and put a nose projecting at each end, and then bored out the key to correspond; then, fearing some one might discover the secret of the key, he put a shoulder on the post, inside the lock, invisible and almost undiscoverable.

Were a tool wanted he made it. Planes of all kinds, carpenter's tools, bits, augers, etc. were exhibited, some of them of perfect workmanship. He made every part, cutting tools and all.

EXECUTION OF THE WILL.

In the making of the will six witnesses, including his brother Andrew, Dr. Johnson, of East Machias, and Dr. Hunter, of Machias, were present. A copy of his sister's will, from whom he inherited his property of $7,000, and a package of bonds, used as a symbol of the property, were laid on the table. Pointing to the will and the bonds, Dr. Johnson made an imitation of writing, and with a questioning look asked him if he should write his will—he had earned by long practice to read upon the lips many words. He nodded assent. Then Dr. J. imitated death, pointed to the old will, the bonds, the blank paper, saying in words, "When you are dead and buried, what do you want done with all your money?" The words "when," "dead," "buried," "what," "all," and "money," he could without doubt read from the lips. He replied, moving his lips to say "baby," his sign for his brother Jacob, pointing to the door out of which he had gone, and described a half circle on top of his head, his sign for his brother's wife, who wore a braid in that manner, pointing to the door out of which she had gone, and making a cutting motion across his arm to indicate division into equal parts. Then a young lady, who readily communicated with him, repeated Dr. J.'s question. He replied as before, omitting the pointing to the doors. Then she placed the photographs of his heirs before him, repeating the same question with words and signs. He immediately selected the photographs of his brother and wife, with the sign of division. Dr. J. again asked him. He took the two photographs, placed them apart from the others, with the sign of division. His bearing was thoughtful, serious, and intelligent, his eyes keenly fixed on the lips of the party communicating with him.

The will was then written by Dr. Johnson, read to the company, explained to the mute by signs previously used, and to this he nodded his head. He was asked to make his mark, when he took up the pen and, to the surprise of all, signed a capital H.

The Court House was crowded during the whole trial. During the closing arguments there were present many ladies from East Machias, the residence of the parties. Ladies who had never before witnessed a trial and whose manifest interest no doubt had something to do with inspiring the eloquence of counsel. Mr. Heath closed his address to the jury, as follows:

MR. HEATH'S PERORATION.

"There lying in the gloaming, in the twilight of life and day, his eyes heavy with death, drank in her shadow as they traced its spirit lines upon the wall. For thirty summers, to him, wife, mother, sister, daughter, friend, ever her shadow the dumb man loved. Strange, ministering angel, to strew his pathway to the doors of death with the roses of love! He turned his weary head; his love lit eyes brightened, then saddened. Clasping her hands with affection, raising his arm toward heaven, with upturned eyes, tears coursing down the furrows of his time worn cheek, the silent man bade her meet him in the Great Hereafter, where the deaf hear and the dumb sing for joy. Down into the Valley of the Shadow of Death, he went, a Christian, a gentleman, a man. He died, happy in the thought that Margaret, by his loving will, would be shielded in the autumn of her life. Living, he loved her; stricken, he willed her the half of all he had, that her youth of poverty might be an old age of ease; dying, he blessed her.

May your verdict record his dying, loving wish, in limperishable letters upon the records of this Court."

The jury were out an hour, and returned a verdict sustaining the will, upon the issues of capacity, intention, and undue influence raised by the defense.

JUDGE PETERS' CHARGE.

It is needless to say that the charge of the Judge, like whatever passes through his hand, was well done, stating, after his manner, the positions of the counsel on both sides, and summarizing the evidence under each position. Among other things he said: "A sound mind is required,—that means a mind sound enough, properly, to devise or bequeath property. It may be the lowest degree of mental soundness. Mere intellectual feebleness is not enough to constitute unsoundness. Disposing mind means as much mind and memory as would enable a man to transact common business with that intelligence which belongs to the weakest class of sound minds. He might not be able to make contracts, except of a simple nature, and might not have the ability to manage an estate and still have the capacity to make a will. A disposing memory exists when a man can remember, at least with a general definiteness, what property he has, its condition generally, not minutely, his relations to those persons to whom he executes his bounty. He must have active memory enough to bring to his mind the nature and particulars of the business to be transacted, and mental power enough to appreciate them and to form some rational judgment in relation to them. A sound mind does not mean a man of common soundness, not an average; there must be the lowest and highest to make an average.

If you are satisfied that the testator executed the paper with the belief that he thereby gave to his brother and his brother's wife, such property as he should possess when he should die, then you will be authorized to regard it as a valid will and testament, though he might not really know what the will was. It is enough that he understood and appreciated what the effect of the act would be, though he had no knowledge of any of the forms pertaining to it required by law. In popular terms, he must know what he is about. Ordinarily, though not always, a less degree of intellect is required to make a will, than to make a contract. I know of no different rule for this case than for any other. That the testator was deaf and dumb does not change the rule, which is general. The application to particular cases is for the jury." The Judge also held that a person under guardianship could make a will, if of sufficient intelligence.

At the close of the charge, Judge Peters paid the following deserved compliment: "Gentlemen, in nearly forty years observation in Courts, I have never seen a case tried with better ability than that displayed in this case, upon both sides."

Your reporter feels just fled in adding that Mr. Heath, only twenty-eight years of age, has by his efforts in this case raised himself, per saltum, to the front rank of his profession in this State. J. D. P.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Journal says: A broad-backed, strong-armed fellow, about six feet tall, and of the right build for a desirable woodchopper, has been making the rounds of Lewiston and Auburn, swearing his true by the sale of papers of pits. He persistently accompanies his pins with a sad history about a distressed family, a widowed mother, an orphan sister, or calamities of a greater or less magnitude. It is now reported to us, by ladies and gentlemen who, believing the fellow's representations, and pitying him, have given him articles of clothing, food, money, etc., that they have reason to believe he is an imposter. They have ascertained that he seldom tells the same story in two places and that his suffering sisters, cousins and aunts have no existence. If we mistake not this is the same fellow, of whom we have heard, through the press, in various parts of the State. There are many deserving recipients of charity, but benevolent people should be on their guard against imposters.

The Journal says: Three or four weeks ago, a twelve-years-old son of Dennis Cochlan, of this city, employed in a Lewiston woollen mill, scratched one of his thumbs slightly. The thumb became poisoned from the wool, and became frightfully swollen. The bone rotted, and the chances for saving his thumb were small. A Lewiston physician cut out a section of the bone, a few days since, and the wound is progressing well.

The Journal says: There is now in Auburn jail, a man 60 years old or more, who was incarcerated about three weeks ago, by a town in this county, for non-payment of a tax of $4 14. He served through the war of the rebellion and lost an eye in the service. He claims that he was unable to pay his tax on account of sickness in his family. Some of the members of the Androscoggin Bar, hearing of the facts, have volunteered to furnish the necessary assets, and get the old soldier out. It is probable that the veteran will soon be marching home.

Cumberland.

The Press contains the following list of accidents: A man named Walker broke his leg at the Rolling Mills, Friday, by falling from a ladder. Mr. Loren Merrill of Parsonsfield, injured in the Boston and Maine disaster, is at the Perry House with spine badly hurt. Miss Emma Libby, slipped and fell Saturday night on the sidewalk on Congress street, Portland, and sprained her ankle badly. A little son of Thomas Fisher, Portland, while coasting on Brackett street, Saturday afternoon, slid over the high steps at the foot of the street and broke his leg. Granville E. Libby, a young man employed at the Kerosene Oil Works, Portland, while working a circular saw in the carpenter's shop received a severe though not dangerous gash over the right eye near the temple. Mrs. Walter Cox fell on the icy sidewalk in front of New Jerusalem Temple on High street, Portland, Sunday, and broke a limb.

Kennebec.

A despatch says that Willis E. Gardiner, a boy about 17 years old, fell from the fourth story of the shoe factory, in Augusta, through the elevator passage, Monday afternoon, a distance of forty feet, sustaining injuries which will probably prove fatal.

The Gardiner Reporter says that the farm buildings of Washington Lawrence, of Pittston, were entered one night last week by thieves, who carried off his pork, beef, a large amount of wheat, beans and barley, also a harness and other things of value. After getting away from the premises they found themselves overloaded, and relieved themselves by hiding several bags of grain behind a wall. They were found by some little girls on their way to school, and restored to the owner. No clue to the rascals has as yet been found.

The Augusta Journal says over $1,200,000 a year will be disbursed by the pension office which is to be established in Augusta, in quarterly installments, and much of this will be paid directly to pensioners who come to Augusta to draw the amount due them. It is surprising, the number of pensioners in the country. Some 437,000 applications have been filed by invalids, and 380,000 by widows and guardians. The arrears of pension bill was taken advantage of by hundreds of Maine soldiers, and many a sick and needy man who once drew the blue was made glad by the Government's generosity. Probably the largest amount of back pension money ever drawn by any man in this State, was by Patrick Dennehy, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who got $5000. He lost his sight in the army, and Uncle Sam now pays him $72 a month for his sacrifice.

Lincoln.

The Village Herald says preparation have been made to cut about 100,000 tons of ice in Boothbay this season.

The Village Herald says an old lady in Wiscasset, sitting before the stove a few days since, was so severely burned by her clothing catching fire, that she survived the terrible shock only a few hours, when death came to her relief. She was 85 years of age.

Miss Rumrill, of Wiscasset, while walking down the road a few evenings since, in company with some of her friends, had her dress catch fire from a torchlight lamp carelessly carried by one of the company, and her outer clothing was burned entirely from her body. She threw herself upon the ground, rolling over in the snow, and thus by her remarkable presence of mind saved herself from a terrible death.

Washington.

Lucy A. Johnson advertises in the Machias Republican as follows: "As for my husband posting me, and saying I left his bed and board, it is a mistake, as I slept on my own bed and board, and thank the Lord I am glad to get rid of him."

York.

The Ossipee News says Mrs. David Boudreau, an operative in the woolen mills in Limerick, arose about three o'clock Monday morning to prepare breakfast for her family. A few moments after, her husband, hearing an odd noise, made search and found her lying senseless at the foot of the cellar stairs, with a broken kerosene lamp at her side and the flames rapidly spreading. She was badly bruised about the head and was unable to give any account of the accident.

CENTENARY OF DANIEL WEBSTER'S BIRTH.

One hundred years ago to-day—Jan. 18, 1782—DANIEL WEBSTER was born in Salisbury (now Franklin) New Hampshire, the second son o Ebenezer Webster and his second wife Abigail Eastman. In 1796 he was sent to the Phillips Exeter Academy, and although as a scholar he gave decided promise of future distinction, he has stated that while there he could never muster courage to make a declamation. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1801, and from January to September 1802 was principal of the Academy at Fryeburg, Maine, at a salary of $350 a year, which he supplemented by copying for the Register of Deeds to the extent of two folio volumes. In 1804 he went to Boston and entered the law office of Christopher Gore, afterwards Governor of Massachusetts and United States Senator, to complete his legal studies. In the spring of 1805 he was admitted to the bar of the Court of Common Pleas in Boston. In 1806 he established himself in practice at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. In 1812 he was elected to Congress, taking his seat in the special session of May, 1813 and was placed on the Committee on Foreign Affairs. June 10, 1813, he delivered his maiden speech upon resolutions he had introduced on the repeal of the Berlin and Milan decrees, and its ability and power attracted the attention of the country. He at once took a first rank among the debaters in Congress. In the 14th Congress he took prominent part in support of the charter of the United States Bank, and secured the passage of a resolution requiring all payments to the treasury after Feb. 20, 1817, to be made in specie or its equivalents, thus restoring the depreciated currency of the country.

In December, 1813, Mr. Webster's house in Portsmouth was burned, with his library and all the fruits of his professional labors. He hesitated some time between Albany and Boston as a future residence but decided on the latter and at once entered upon a large practice there. March 10, 1818, he delivered his famous argument in the Dartmouth College case before the U. S. Supreme Court as the junior counsel for the plaintiffs, against John Holmes, of Maine, and Attorney-General Wirt for the defendants in error. His part in this case so established his reputation that he was afterwards retained in almost every important case before the Supreme Court.

In 1820 he was a member of the Convention to revise the Constitution o. Massachusetts after the separation of Maine. His great oration December 22, 1820, on The Landing of the Pilgrims, was the first of a series of remarkable addresses that placed him at the head of American orators. Among his great efforts of this class may be named the orations upon laying the corner-stone of Bunker Hill Monument in 1825, and upon the completion of that work in 1843; his eulogy on Adams and Jefferson in 1826 and his discourse on laying the corner-stone of the extension of the National Capitol in 1851.

In 1822 he was elected to Congress from Boston and early in the session made his noted speech on the Greek Revolution. He was reelected in 1824 and in 1827 was elected a Senator of the United States from Massachusetts, to fill a vacancy, and retained his seat by reelections until 1841. His career as a giant of the Senatorial debates of that period is household history, and every schoolboy is familiar with portions of his most famous parliamentary effort, the extemporaneous Reply to Senator Robert Y. Hayne, of South Carolina, on Jan. 26 and 27, 1830. In 1839 he made a short visit to Europe where he received marked honors. On the accession of President Harrison in 1841, he was appointed Secretary of State and continued in the office under President Tyler until the spring of 1843. In 1845 he was returned to the Senate as the successor of Rufus Choate, and in March, 1850, made his much-criticised speech in which he abandoned the Wilmot Proviso and justified the Fugitive Slave Law. In December, 1850, he was appointed Secretary of State by President Fillmore and in that year the celebrated "Hulsemann Letter" was written. In 1851 he obtained from Spain the pardon of the followers of the Cuban filibuster Lopez, and about the same time received from the British Government an apology for the interference of a British cruiser with an American steamer in the waters of Nicaragua, a similar concession having been previously obtained by him in the case of the steamer Caroline.

In January, 1852, he argued the important India-rubber patent case at Trenton, which was his last great forensic effort. Sanguine hopes of his selection by the Whig National Convention of that year were entertained by his friends, but the Presidential candidacy was given to General Scott. In May, 1852 Mr. Webster was injured by being thrown from a carriage near his home in Marshfield, and his health became such that after brief visits to Washington he found it necessary to seek the rest of his Marshfield home. Here he passed the closing months of his life tendering his resignation, which was declined by President Fillmore. The last important public business that engaged his attention was the affair of the American fisheries off the coast of the British Provinces. He died at Marshfield, Oct. 23, 1852, four months after the death of Henry Clay, and not quite three years after the death of John C. Calhoun, who with himself had been the most conspicuous figures in the United States Senate.

The funeral at Marshfield was attended by deputations of distinguished men from various States, and funeral orations and sermons were delivered throughout the country.

GUITEAU'S SUPPRESSED SPEECH.

The N. Y. Herald publishes Guiteau's proposed "speech," which occupies nearly seven of its columns in fine type. It consists largely of letters and newspaper extracts with a great mass of his peculiar style of protestation and argument in justification of his act. He closes as follows:

And now, gentlemen, I leave this case with you.

At the last great day you and all men will stand in the presence of the Deity, crying for mercy and justice. As you sat here so will be your final abode in the great hereafter. I beg you do not get the Deity down on you by meddling with this case. I beg for your own sakes and for the sake of the American people, and for the sake of the generations yet unborn, that you let this case alone. You cannot afford to touch it. Let your verdict be that it was the Deity's act; not mine. When the President was shot his Cabinet telegraphed to foreign nations that it was the act of "a madman," and it will be far better every way that it be officially decided that it was the act of "a madman."

THE INSANE HOSPITAL.

We are informed that the unsigned communication from Augusta in Monday's Boston Globe which was largely made up of extracts from letters of Mrs. C. A. Quinby, was not written by her, but that some person to whom she wrote letters in 1880 and in January 1881, sent the article to the Globe and incorporated Mrs. Quinby's letters in it. The headlines and the introductory reference to Mrs. Quinby in the Globe were all calculated to convey the impression that she had furnished to that paper the extracts from her own letters containing the ill-natured flings at her associates. From advance sheets of the Trustees' Report for 1881, extracts of which we shall print hereafter, it appears that Mrs. Quinby now unites in endorsing the legislative report vindicating the institution "from all suspicions and aspersions," and in assuring the friends of the unfortunate patients "that they are provided with a comfortable home and are receiving that care and treatment essential for their happiness and possible restoration to health."

A MICHIGAN LIBEL SUIT.

A libel suit against the Detroit Evening News has been attracting the attention of journalists far and wide. The News some time since, in giving the news, made it appear that a man named Peoples was responsible for the murder of a girl named Whitts, with whom he was on terms of intimacy. The body of the girl was found in the water, and the history of the case was given in full, and was so clear to the News that it expressed the opinion above indicated. Peoples brought a civil suit against the News to recover damages. The publisher defended by trying to prove the truth of his assertion. He was able to make his charge so clear that at the civil trial in which the publisher appeared as a defendant became in fact a criminal case, in which the plaintiff was practically made the respondent to the charge of murder; and so completely did the News sustain its charge that the jury brought in a verdict in favor of the newspaper and practically affirming the charge of murder against Peoples. Although the affair occurred some time since, no legal steps had been taken to arraign Peoples, but upon the announcement of the verdict in this suit the man has been arrested and put in jail, and will be tried for murder. The case is probably without parallel.

RAILWAY SLAUGHTER.

[From the Boston Herald.]

It will begin to be said that corporations have no brains, as it has long been said they have no souls, if disasters like that on the Hudson River railroad continue to be possible. It is a disgrace to any railroad management, and a shame to the legislative power that creates corporations, and should provide for their proper control and regulation, that passengers should be roasted to death in the sight of hundreds of helpless and agonized onlookers. Inflammable burning fluid and coal or wood stoves should have been prohibited in passenger cars long ago. And if, in addition to the axes which the companies are required to carry, one or two fire extinguishers to each car had been provided, as suggested in the Herald, the fatal blaze could have been quenched almost instantly. Upon the occasion of a similar holocaust some months ago, we pointed to the importance of providing doors or panels in the sides of the cars that could be opened outwardly in case of need. A long car, with the end doors rendered useless by "telescoping," becomes a veritable death trap in a collision like that at Spuyten Duyvil. If the car corporations would devote a portion of the money wasted on gimcracks and useless upholstery to making their carriages safe and equipping them against the casualties incident to rapid transit and careless employes, they would better deserve the liberal patronage that has made millionaires of their managers.

THE INCORPORATION OF BANGOR—1791.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

I give a copy of the original petition for the incorporation of Bangor, now in the Massachusetts Archives, in the hand-writing of Mr. Andrew Webster:

PENOBSCOT RIVER VS. MAY, 1790.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court Assembled:

The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of and living upon a tract of land in the County of Lincoln by the name of number one, second range, lying on the west side of Penobscot river, bounded as follows, viz.: Southerly on number one, easterly on Penobscot river, northerly and westerly on Government land, as will appear by Capt. Stone's survey. Humbly sheweth that there is living on said land 45 families and are possessed of about two-thirds of the property of what is called Kenduskeag plantation, or the plantation from the Widow Wheeler's mills, and upward to the head of the settlement on the west side of Penobscot river. We labor under many disadvantages for want of being incorporated with town privileges therefore humbly pray your Honors would be pleased to take our difficult circumstances into your wise consideration and incorporate us into a town by the name of Bangor. We have no Justice of the Peace for 30 miles on this side of the river, no grand jurymen, and some people not of the best morals. Your Honors know what the consequences must be. We doubt not but you will grant us our request and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

ANDREW WEBSTER, Clerk.

P. S. The inhabitants of said plantation at sundry legal meetings for two years past have unanimously voted to be incorporated, without which we can have no benefit of our school or ministerial land."

"In 1791, having acquired 576 inhabitants, the plantation through its representative, the Rev. Seth Noble, procured from the General Court an act of incorporation. They had chosen the name of Sunbury * * * but when the Speaker called the name of his town, Mr. Noble replied, "Bangor," which was the name of his favorite tune."

I have met with the same statement before relative to the change of name, but it will be seen from reading the petition that it could not be correct. J. W. P.

SENATOR PENDLETON'S NEW HOUSE IN WASHINGTON. The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune gives the following description of the new Washington residence of Senator Pendleton, of Ohio:

The wife and daughters of Senator Pendleton held their first reception in their new home, in Sixteenth street, on Thursday, receiving upward of five hundred visitors. Among the many handsome houses at the capital, probably not one has so little of ostentatious display and so much of simple elegance as this. The exterior of the house is not unlike other brick houses of the Queen Anne age of architecture, but the inner or has a marked individuality. The woodwork is of poplar pine and maple, polished and oiled, and beautiful grains showing clearly. There are no marble mantles in the house, all being of maple, with the exception of that in the drawing-room, which is of white wood so finely carved and polished as to look like the purest Carrara. An oval mirror above it is also framed in the same white polished wood. The walls are hung with pale blue mummy cloth with a cornice of gilt, and the portieres are of the same texture. A sofa and chairs in the room are of gilt, upholstered in tapestry purchased and used by the family when residing abroad. The morning room adjoining is in crimson, and the dining-room on the other side is in the soft shades of old gold and olive. Perhaps the most comfortable room in the house is the library, a large room on the second floor, with wide alcove windows. Some pretty pieces of pottery, very suggestive of foreign art, were fashioned by one of the Senator's daughters in Cincinnati.

The New York World remarks that somehow or other the friendship for James A. Garfield manifested by the sort of "Friends of the Late President" that have appeared anonymously in print "does not seem to be incompatible with a very ardent hatred of his most intimate and trusted counsellor, James Gillespie Blaine."

Later in the day it was taken out, burned to a crisp.

Among the Americans in Europe who have subscribed there to the Garfield Memorial are Mr. Morton, the United States Minister in Paris, who heads the list with £1,000; Consul-General Walker, Dr. Evans, Wm. Seligman, the Paris representatives of Arnold, Constable & Co. and of Tiffany & Co., John Munroe, Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., James Phalen, Cornelius Roosevelt and Dr. E. Warren. The whole amount at the close of 1881 in the hands of the Treasurer was nearly $20,000, of which no less than $600 was subscribed by Augusta, Empress of Germany. The Widow Pommery, G. L. Mumm and Roederer, subscribed $500 each.

Scoville's Remarkable Argument.

HE DEVOTES ALL HIS TIME TO ABUSING THE GOVERNMENT COUNCIL.

WASHINGTON, Jan 17 When the Court opened this morning none of the counsel for the prosecution were present and at the suggestion of Judge Cox Scoville waited a few minutes before resuming his argument.

At ten minutes past 10 the District Attorney appeared and Scoville began. He was at once interrupted by Guiteau who had been looking over towards the jury for some minutes in an anxious or expectant manner. "Hadn't I better deliver it now?" he called out

"Oh yes," replied Scoville "I had forgotten" Then turning to Judge Cox he said "He desires, Your Honor, to prefer a request that he be allowed to address the jury. I have looked over the paper which he desires to read and see nothing in it of an objectionable character"

Guiteau's Address

Judge Cox nodded assent and Guiteau said, "I have written down what I wish to say and will read it 'Tis in regard to my speech" He then read with considerable emphasis, "I intend no disrespect to this honorable Court in general. I am satisfied with the law as laid down by Your Honor, but I have suggested a still broader view which I ask Your Honor to follow, to wit that if the jury believe that I believed it was right to remove the President because I had special Divine authority so to do and was forced to by the Deity, they will acquit on the ground of transitory mania Sickles, McFarland and Hiscock were acquitted on the ground of transitory mania In my speech published yesterday, and which I presume Your Honor has read, I gave my reason for asking Your Honor so to charge Mr Reed made a brilliant and lawyer like plea for the defence and Scoville is making a strong argument for his theory, but neither Reed nor Scoville represent me in this defence I am here as my own counsel, and as stated at the opening of the case no one can represent me rightly to the jury. I know my feelings and my inspiration in removing the President and I have set them forth to my satisfaction in my speech published yesterday, I ask Your Honor, in the name of justice in the name of the American people, to allow me to address the jury of my countrymen when my life may be at stake If a man in that jury has a doubt as to his duty in acquitting me my speech will probably settle him in my favor, and therefore in the interest of justice it is of the greatest importance that they hear me in my defence Your Honor can decide the matter if you have any doubt as to your duty"

Scoville Arraigns the Counsel for the Prosecution

Scoville began with a general complaint of alleged unfairness on the part of the prosecution particularly of the prosecuting attorney. He had from the beginning prescribed who should visit the jail and who should not He had introduced persons into the prisoner's cell under false guise to worm out his secrets and when the prisoner said anything which might inure to his benefit the prosecuting attorney had been careful to let it become known. He complained of Corkhill's unfairness in destroying the notes of Stenographer Bailey so that the defence could not have the benefit of them. The conduct of the prosecution in the court room he alleged was not only unfair to the defence but

and more befitting a police court than this cause, and the custom of the counsel upon the other side of nodding and bowing to the jury becomes highly improper on the part of the Government officers The prosecution had also been unfair and discourteous toward the witnesses for the defence. Sometimes as in the case of Dr Spitzka pursuing them with ridicule and abuse even after they had returned to their homes Commenting upon the failure of the prosecution to put upon the stand the detective, McElfresh, who had been summoned by them, and upon whose evidence the defence relied to show the condition of the prisoner's mind and his utterances at the time of the shooting, Scoville said that he desired to hear and impartiality of the prosecution until this and similar arbitrary acts should be explained He called the attention of the jury to the refusal of the prosecution to permit the defence to introduce the testimony of Dr. McFarland a gentleman who had an experience of 32 years in dealing with the insane and [illegible] of the time [illegible] connection with some asylum and who might have materially aided in determining the true condition of the prisoner's mind

No More of the Fairness

Reed suggested here, "They refused to let you have a photograph identified"

Mr Davidge interrupting, "Is this case your Honor argued upon the law and evidence before the jury or upon what the counsel think ought to be before them."

Scoville—"I propose to argue this case just as I am arguing it You may interrupt me as much as you please if I misstate law or facts but I propose to be the judge of my remarks"

Davidge—I see you do but I don't know as it is of sufficient consequence to inquire about it"

Scoville unwittingly raised a smile by declaring as one count of his indictment that the Government had acted unfairly in putting upon the stand so many witnesses to prove the act of killing "Going over and over the horrors of the scene," said the counsel, "and I declare that it was a shame and disgrace the exhibitions made here by the prosecution for the purpose of influencing your feeling and emotions rather than your judgment.

Corkhill, "We should have been more polite and sympathizing toward the prisoner"

Scoville then criticised severely the course of the prosecution in refusing to permit the prisoner to address the jury for a brief hour or two, simply because he might disclose by his manner or speech his true mental condition In alluding to the discussion on the proposition to allow the prisoner to speak, Scoville quoted the District Attorney as having said "If the prisoner should be allowed to speak it ought to be from the dock"

Corkhill—"I said nothing of the kind I protested against his return to the counsel table, and I said it would be a disgrace to have him speak from the dock."

Guiteau called out, "Well, I have been a good boy lately, so you had better let me out."

Scoville then called attention to a letter written by Guiteau to the District Attorney from which a portion had been clipped as he claimed by the prosecution and in a spirit of unfairness.

Davidge—(smiling)—"Oh, just assume that one of the conspirators cut it out."

Corkhill—"I suppose what you are driving at is that you want the jury to think I cut a slip out of that letter"

Scoville—"I believe that it was done by you or by your direction, for the reason that you believed it for the interest of the prosecution."

"So do I," shouted Guiteau.

Corkhill—"You and the prisoner agree occasionally"

Scoville, having pretty roundly abused the District Attorney, paused apparently for a new head for his discourse or his criticisms when Corkhill suggested, "If you want to talk about Judge Porter don't hesitate to say anything that suggests itself, Porter will read it from the record and doubtless will make some pleasant comments in reply."

Scoville then proceeded to give the jury his views upon Judge Porter and to instruct them as to how much weight they should attach to his utterances, and as to the best means of counteracting the influence of his oratory "He had" he said "closely watched Porter at the beginning of this case and had learned that his (Porter's) most effective part was in the exhibition of himself. He had a good mind, that he had admirable command of language, and a most impressive manner, but his eloquence was not of the heart, and he wanted the jury to take into consideration the fact that he (Porter) had come here for a large fee and was prostituting his talents in his efforts to hang an insane man.

After Recess.

After waiting fifteen minutes for the arrival of the counsel for the prosecution, Scoville was told by the Court to proceed and he responded with a review of the prisoner's life from about 1859, when he left Ann Arbor and joined the Oneida Community, to the present, dwelling particularly upon his religious tendency, which began to develop strongly when the prisoner reached nineteen.

Scoville insisted upon a parallel between Guiteau and his father, L. W. Guiteau. The latter he contended was one of those persons who was thought not insane, but may be said to be upon the border line of insanity and, nothing but his business, which requires regular duties to be performed and supposed occupation for his mind, kept him from crossing the line He argued the same with Guiteau and attributed to his failure in business and consequent lack of steady employment, the rapid development of insanity in his case.

Scoville continued up to the hour of adjournment his review of the prisoner's life.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS--First Session

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17. A number of petitions for a Commission of Inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic for an increase of pay to the members of life service and by Mr. Plumb from the citizens of Kansas for woman's suffrage, were presented

Mr Vest from the Committee on Public Buildings reported with amendment a bill making an appropriation for the purchase of grounds and the erection thereon of a hall of records.

A bill by Mr Blair granting a pension to Lucretia R Garfield

During the forenoon hour Mr. Beck resumed his remarks upon Ingalls's resolution declaring that the pension arrears law ought not to be repealed He spoke at considerable length in support of his allegation that the legislation of 1879 was instigated and pressed through Congress by pension claim agents, and read quotations from the Pension Commissioner's report to show that frauds were almost the necessary consequence of arrearage legislation.

Mr. Ingalls deferred a formal reply to Mr Beck's remarks for the present, and the Sherman funding bill was resumed

Mr Plumb argued that the redemption fund for United States notes should be diminished He advocated the redemption of the [illegible] out of the surplus revenue over and above one hundred million dollars and that this fund ought to be reduced, except in the redemption of United States notes

Mr Teller opposed the bill, not because he thought the bonds could not be sold, but because he was disinclined to continue this everlasting tinkering of the finance

Mr Saunders favored the bill and opposed any amendment of the essential features

Mr. Pendleton supported Mr. Vest's amendment.

The Senate without closing the debate adjourned till to-morrow

House

Mr Armfield, of North Carolina, offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of five to inquire into and report concerning the alleged abuses practiced by the officers of Internal Revenue or other persons in the sixth Collection District of North Carolina

Leave was granted to the Committee on Ways and Means to sit during the session of the House

Mr Dingley, of Maine, offered a resolution instructing the Committee of Commerce to inquire as to what change of law can be made so as to afford relief to the merchant marine engaged in foreign carrying trade, and what measures can be adopted to promote our shipbuilding and other commercial interests, referred

Mr. Belmont of New York offered a resolution requesting the President to communicate to the House the correspondence between this Government and its agents since the first of April, 1879, relating to the efforts of this Government to bring about peace between Chili, Peru and Bolivia and such other correspondence on that subject as may be in possession of the Department of State, referred.

Mr Valentine, of Nebraska, introduced a bill providing that the appointments of Indian Agents shall be in force until their successors are appointed, referred

The Speaker then proceeded to call the committees for reports Mr Crapo, of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Banking and Currency reported back a resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the House what number of national banks organized from July 1st, 1881, to Jan 1st, 382 capital and other information, also calling for similar information as to the banks whose corporate existence expires between Jan. 1st, 1882, and Jan 1st 1884, adopted

Mr Harris, of Massachusetts, of the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported a resolution directing the Secretary of the Navy to transmit to the House all papers and correspondence relative to the Chiriqui coaling stations, and the appropriation for the purchase thereof, and requesting him to withhold all payment for such stations until such information has been laid before the House and action had by Congress, adopted.

The call of the Committees having been concluded Mr Robeson called up the report of the Committee on Rules increasing the membership of the various committees of the House He said that the thirteen committees whose membership it was proposed to increase had before them now nearly ninety per cent of all the business of the House As Mr Robeson concluded his brief remarks he demanded the previous question Much confusion ensued and the motion was finally withdrawn.

Mr Hutchins opposed the report of the Committee on Rules Had any of the committees which were referred to asked for an increased membership? He had not heard of it Did any one complain of the way in which the committees had been organized? Every one seemed satisfied with them He hoped measures could be devised that in the future no one man, but the House itself might form the committees The Speaker had too much power, and he not the House, controlled legislation The committees should be appointed by the House and the Speaker should be the presiding officer, but not the dictator of the legislatures of the whole American people.

Mr. Kasson also opposed the report of the Committee on Rules. He was opposed to increasing the membership of the committees His experience had taught him more business was done by small committees than by large ones. He advocated a measure by which the House should be charged with the duty of appointing the committees. It would be no disrespect to the Speaker. He had done his duty always embarrassingly imposed upon by the rules. Such a measure would relieve him from that embarrassment; and that inducement of bribery by the offer of places in the election of Speaker should be done away with once and forever. (Applause)

Mr. Orth then offered as a substitute for the committee's report his amendment for the election at the beginning of each Congress of a commission charged with the duty of assigning the membership of committees.

Mr. Robeson raised a point of order against Orth's substitute, but withheld it for the present.

Mr. Reed, of Maine, member of the Committee on Rules, said he would vigorously protest against Orth's proposition if he thought there was any danger of its being adopted by this or any other House. Think of the committees of the House going to a commission, think of the log rolling there would be to have the commission elected in order to favor particular measures He did not believe any material interest of the country was liable to be destroyed or injured by any committee appointed by the Speaker. Every action of every committee had to undergo the scrutiny of the House. Personal grievances existed in every legislative body

If the Speaker had performed his duties faithfully and he believed he had even then he could not escape falling into some errors, but the House was ready to stand by what he (Speaker) had done. He (Reed) did not concur entirely with his Committee in regard to the increase of committee membership; neither did he believe the committees should be appointed with regard to geographical divisions. He believed the [illegible] interests of individuals and not where they slept ought to be considered in determining on what committees they should serve.

Mr. Kelley regarded the report of the Committee on Rules as a grievous mistake He contended that more work was performed by small committees than by large ones, and asserted it would be better to abolish the Committee on Ways and Means entirely than to increase its membership to fifteen. He therefore moved to lay the report upon the table, lost. Pending further action the House adjourned.

FOUND DEAD ON THE ICE

Darius Burnham, of Oldtown, the Victim

Yesterday morning, between six and seven o clock, a man by the name of Ransom Hinckley, of Oldtown, while in search of a fox that had broken away with a piece of chain on his leg, found a man named Darius Burnham lying upon the ice on the main river, above the Cutler & Eddy mill frozen to death. Our informant stated that Mr Burnham, who had been employed by night in the [illegible] steam mill had gone out upon the ice, for the purpose of getting a pail of water, when he fell into the open channel and was carried over the dam He managed in some way to get upon the ice again near the end of the Bradley mills where he was found as above stated. When discovered the unfortunate man had on only his shirt, moccasins and stockings His pants were found near by He was lying upon his face It is supposed that he must have removed his clothing in order to wring out the water, but that during the operation perished from exhaustion and cold. Mr Burnham was a man of about thirty-five years of age, and had a brother living, together with his mother, in Oldtown. According to our informant, he was a skilful mechanic and in some respects was endowed with superior mental powers, but possessed also of an unbalanced mind

CENTRAL CHURCH SABBATH SCHOOL.

The Annual Festival—A Pleasant Occasion

The children connected with the Central Church Sabbath School held their Annual Festival last evening, in the vestry of that church, commencing at six o'clock The attendance was very large. An abundance of choice refreshments having been brought in by the parents and friends of the children, an excellent supper was served. At the conclusion of this enjoyable feature of the entertainment, a very pleasing order of exercises was introduced, consisting of tableaux, music by the High School Orchestra, accompanied by Miss May Lincoln on the piano, etc. The duet "What are the Wild Waves Saying" was rendered in a charming manner by Misses Alma Haynes and Sadie Parker A piano solo by Miss Maud Thissell was very finely performed. The members of the High School Orchestra are deserving of much praise for the efficiency manifested in their correct rendering of quite difficult selections. The cornet solo, "Il Trovatore," by Master Adams, calls for special praise Young Adams displays in his playing much power and a delicacy of manipulation that stamps him as no mean performer. Being heartily encored, he very gracefully responded Miss May Lincoln, as an accompanist, won deserved praise for her playing. Following the musical exercises, the programme consisted of tableaux made up from Mother Goose Melodies and Kate Greenaway's pictures. Many very little folks took part in the tableaux, which were not only a source of delight to the children, but were of no slight interest even to the older people. The Festival was a happy success, and the gladsome look that beamed in the bright eyes of the little ones, reflecting the joy in their hearts, must have caused the Superintendent and all who assisted to feel well repaid for their trouble.

STEREOPTICON TALKS.

Mr H H Ragan's Lecture—"Paris, the Magnificent."

In point of numbers the audience at City Hall last evening was not what the very entertaining and instructive lecture by Mr Ragan deserved, but it is hoped that the remaining lectures in this unusually attractive course may be greeted with crowded houses, as they certainly would be if our citizens were aware of their merit Mr Ragan came among us as a stranger and on the first night labored under the greatest disadvantages which, however, arose through no fault of his The lecture last evening was entitled 'Paris, the Magnificent,' and the last word in the title may be fitly used to describe Mr. Ragan's effort and the views which illustrated the lecture Over fifty superb dissolving views were thrown upon the screen, illustrating the ancient and mediæval Paris and the city of the present We have not the space this morning to devote to a synopsis of the lecture Suffice, that it would have been entertaining and instructive to a Parisian Mr Ragan closed with an eloquent peroration on the French Republic. We will only add to this very brief report an extract from the Dubuque Telegraph, which expresses just what we wish to say 'Mr Ragan has discovered the true 'heart of history,' and uses it as it should be used, to enlighten and lend valuable experiences to the present"

Cyrus P Church vs George W Collins

The plaintiff resides in Bradford and the defendant in Bridgewater, Aroostook County

The plaintiff covenanted with the defendant by his indenture made on the 16th day of February, 1880 to put in his time and attention to the building of a first class tannery in said Bridgewater of eighty lay away vats for the manufacture of hemlock sole leather and to supervise the same till its completion, which was to be in eight months from the date of said indenture said tannery to be built on land of said Collins And the defendant on his part, in consideration of the covenants of the plaintiff covenanted to furnish sufficient money and materials to build said tannery within the eight months aforesaid and to furnish land for the site thereof with certain water rights to supply the demands of said tannery, and to give his time to the building of and putting in good order said tannery, and to stock a store on the premises with goods, furnish a man to tend the same, and divide the profits with the plaintiff, and upon completion of the tannery, as aforesaid to convey an undivided half thereof together with an undivided half of the land on which said tannery was to be erected at the price stipulated in said indenture, and then to form with the plaintiff a copartnership to carry on the business of manufacturing hemlock sole leather And the plaintiff alleges that in pursuance of the agreements and covenants he went to work erecting said tannery, devoting his whole time to it till the 15th day of August, 1880 and at that time had nearly completed the same with all the necessary out buildings and appliances to commence the business of manufacturing as aforesaid, when by reason of a refusal on the part of the defendant to furnish money, materials, etc, as aforesaid, the plaintiff was unable to proceed further; and that defendant did not carry out his agreement in regard to the store, and the plaintiff alleges that by reason of said breaches of defendant's covenants he has been grievously damaged and for which he claims of the defendant ten thousand dollars

Now the defendant says that in consequence of the destruction of a mill by fire upon which they relied wholly for lumber to complete said tannery, the contract was modified, the plaintiff waiving the time mentioned in the original contract for the completion of the tannery and afterwards, in November, 1880, left without giving notice and brought this suit

A BAPTIST MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine but left a lucrative practice for my present profession 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy, Thomas' Electric Oil cured me I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me My wife and child had diphtheria and Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them and if taken in time will cure seven times out of ten I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough and if any one will take a small teaspoon and a half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicines that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Eclectric Oil Dr. E F. RESCUED FROM DEATH.

William J. Coughlin of Somerville Mass, says In the fall of 1876 I was taken with BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and was confined to my bed In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise, I commenced to feel better and to-day I feel better than for three years past

I write this hoping every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness d1t&w no3 mar12

PILES! PILES! PILES!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST! NO ONE NEED SUFFER!

A sure Cure for Blind Bleeding Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr William, (an Indian remedy) called Dr. William's Indian Ointment A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 or 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electuaries do more harm than good William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles itching of the private parts, and for nothing else

Read what the Hon. J. M Coffinberry of Cleveland, says about Dr. William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of Pile Cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr William's Indian Ointment.

HOW I MARRIED HIM.

The Confession of a Young Lady

EDITED BY WILKIE COLLINS.

(Concluded.

CHAPTER VI.

The will had been proved, and I was informed that the document was in course of preparation, when Mrs. Fosdyke returned from her visit to Scotland.

She the sight me looking pale and worn. "The time seems to me to have come," she said, "when I had better make you and Mr. Sax understand each other. Have you been thinking penitent y of your own bad behavior?"

I felt myself blushing. I had been thinking of my conduct to Mr. Sax—and I was heartily ashamed of it, too.

Mrs. Fosdyke went on, half in jest, half in earnest.

"Consult your own sense of propriety!" she said. "Was the poor man to blame for not being rude enough to say No, when a lady asked him to turn over her music? Could he help it, if the same lady persisted in darting with-hins? He ran away from her the next morning. Did you deserve to be told why he left us? Certainly not—after the wretched manner in which you haudled the bedroom candle to Miss Melbury. You foolish girl! Do you think I couldn't see that you were in love with him? Think of the poor, dear, lonely man's misery you, and take you away from my children, for some time to come. There will be a long range engagement, even if he is a monumious enough to forgive you. Shall I ask Miss Melbury to come back with him?" She took pity on me at last, and sat down to write to Mr. Sax. His reply, dated from a country house some twenty miles distant, announced that he would be at Carsham Hall in three days' time.

On that third day the legal paper that I was to sign arrived by post. It was Sunday morning; I was alone in the schoolroom.

In writing to me the lawyer had only alluded to the surviving re ativesof Sir Gerard, nearly kin to him by blood." The document was more explicit. It described the relative as being Sir Gerard's nephew, the son of his sister. The name followed.

It was Sextus Cyril Sax.

I have before me, on three different sheets of paper, the specimens of the effect which this discovery produced on me—as I have torn them up one after another. When I finally took of it my mind seems to fall back into the helpless and passive state of childhood at that time. After all that had passed between us—the man himself being then on his way to the house!—what would he think of me? what in Heaven's name was I to do?

How long I sat petrified, with the document in my lap, I never knew. Somebody knocked at the schoolroom door, and looked in and said something, and went out again. Then there was an interval. Then the door was opened again. A hand was laid kindly on my shoulder. I looked up—and there was Mrs. Fosdyke asking, in the greatest alarm, what was the matter with me.

The tone of her voice roused me into speaking. I could think of nothing but Mr. Sax; I could only say, "Has he come?"

"Yes—and waiting to see you."

Answering in these terms she glanced at the paper in my lap. In the extremity of my helplessness I acted like a sensible creature at last. I told Mrs. Fosdyke all that I have told here.

She red ve ed me before she spoke. Her first proceeding after that was to take me in her arms and give me a kiss. Having so far encouraged me, she next spoke of poor Sir Gerard.

"We all acted like fools," she announced, "in needlessly offending him by protesting against his second marriage. I don't mean you—I mean his son, his nephew and myself. If his second marriage made him happy, what business had we with the disparity of years between husband and wife! I can tell you this, however, as the first of us to regret what he had done. But for his stupid error of judging ed of an interested motive, Sir Gerard might have known there was that much good in his sister's son."

She snatched up a copy of the will, which I had not even noticed that far. "See what the kind old man says of you," she went on, plunging in the middle of the document; "see what he has done for you! Any one but you, my dear, would have read the whole instrument before they looked at the last page. Not you! Your first impulse was to look at me. Still silent, he pointed to the letters on the table—and then he read the signed paper beside them. When I saw that, I was Solder still. I spoke first.

"Surely you don't refuse me?" I said.

He answered, "I thank you with my whole heart; I admire you more than words can say. But, can't take it."

"Why not?"

"The fortune is yours," he said gently. "Remember how poor I am, and feel for me if I say no more."

His head sank on his breast. He stretched out one hand, silently imploring me to understand him. I could endure it no longer. I forgot every consideration which a woman, in my position, ought to have remembered. Out came the desperate words, before I could stop them.

"You won't take my gift by itself?" I said.

"No."

"Will you take Me with it?"

That evening Mrs. Fosdyke laid aside her air sense of humor in a new way. She handled me in a manner.

"After all, my dear," she remarked, "you needn't be ashamed of having spoken first. You have only used the modern privilege of the sex. This is Leap Year."—Belgravia.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR.

This valuable medicine is pure vegetable, the discovery of which was the result of many years' study and study, in order to obtain the cause, the symptoms, and the cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most skeptical of its merits.

CONSUMPTION

is not incurable, if properly attended to—Consumption, as its name denotes, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs, then an indisposition, which becomes coal fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and all symptoms common. This Elixir in fusing the above combination, never fails to remove all morbid irritations and inflammation from the lungs to be relieved, and finally cured them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It imparts strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from opium or any deleterious substance, which while giving a stature as to bring great danger to destroy in the patient, whereas it is medicine given for a cure stops the cough, but, by reducing the vapors, generally destroys the health before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for using this great remedy.
